

Temba Tupu!/walking Naked: Africana Womens Poetic Self-portrait

Temba Tupu! is a one-of-a-kind anthology brimming with a cross-section of poetic styles that represent the creative genius of Africana women from the beginning of written records. Included are selections from Queen Hatshepsut, Makeda, Queen of Sheba, Sojourner Truth, Gladys Casely Hayford, Una Marson, matriarch of Jamaican women's poetry, and Noemia Da Sousa, a revolutionary poet from southern Africa, as well as poems from contemporary poets like the former United States Poet Laureate, Rita Dove, popular people's poet, Nikki Giovanni, Ghanaian poet and dramatist, Ama Ata Aidoo, Trinidadian poet, Grace Nichols, Nigerian poet, Taiwo Olaleye-Ornene, and Brazilian poet and scholar, Miriam Alves. The poems assembled in this anthology center on Black women's consciousness: self definitions, their questions regarding the complexities and contradictions of race and gender, their spiritual and inner lives, and their search for Truth. Many of these poets write to subvert and deconstruct the wicked popular representations of themselves by others. Some of the poems are overtly political while others are not. Some poets use formal prosody, while others do not. However, they all reveal the poets philosophy and the common issues that connect Africana women throughout the Diaspora. Temba Tupu!: The Africana Woman's Poetic Self-Portrait is voluptuous, politically sassy, celebratory, and fearlessly revealing in its truth-telling as its contributors allow their poems to walk naked among us. Using a gynocentric pan-African angle of vision brilliantly, Nagueyalti Warren has gathered in a single volume the writing of more than three hundred Africana women poets from every corner of the Diaspora and has organized their poems in a way that reflects their rites of passage from girlhood to womanhood, the relationships that test and temper their identity, and the women who have inspired them along their journey. Temba Tupu! will be a treasured collection of Africana women s poetry for years to come. --Joanne V. Gabbin, Director, Furious Flower Poetry Center, James Madison University (VA)
